

civil rights discussion as the same battle. In her opinion, the civil rights of people who have a voice and the civil rights of those who do not is not different. She states her opinion on abortion and racism like this, "Abortion and racism are both symptoms of a fundamental human error. The error is thinking that when someone stands in the way of our wants, we can justify getting that person out of our lives. Abortion and racism stem from the same poisonous root, selfishness." But what does all of this have to with the Declaration of Independence?

The founding fathers realized we as a human race are flawed. They realized that we have trouble defining unbiased truths. They laid out undeniable and unbiased truths for us and we still continue to fight! Life is the absolute truth that people have been fighting for for centuries. The question we must all ask ourselves is this: If we truly are founded on life and liberty, why do we take it upon ourselves to determine who gets the freedom to live and who doesn't? If liberty and justice for all is something we pledge, why is it we do not seek justice for those who can not speak out against the civil injustice they are being shown? We must open our eyes and use our words to see and save the ones who can not speak for themselves. Will you?
