

Covid Vaccine vs. Medicine

11/04/21

by Ron & Mariann Cooper

A number of people have researched the pluses and minuses of using the Covid shot (technically, it's not a vaccine). Christian Elliot is one of them. His website is:

deconstructingconventional.com. There are others, also.

We urge you to listen to the testimony of vaccine expert, Geert Vanden Bossche, who pleaded with the government to stop this "insane vaccination campaign" IMMEDIATELY! He is fearful of future consequences from the vaccine. In case you care to watch it, here it is (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZJZxiNxYLpc&t=2128s>) as Geert Vanden Bossche is interviewed by Dr. Philip McMillan.

There are many knowledgeable people that are fearful that people who get the Covid shot will have long term complications, including death! Some are concerned that the shot can modify your DNA and affect your offspring, and can also change your natural immunity. We believe the risk of serious sickness or dying is greater by getting the shot than not getting the shot, but instead take the medicine when you get the virus itself. If you don't get the shot, then you should get the medication in advance, to take when you get the virus or the next variant. You can't hide from it forever. Odds are you will get the virus or mutated virus even if you have the shot, so have the medicine and supplements handy.

We believe that if you do that, the possibility of suffering or dying from the virus or vaccine is much less and you will have established a natural immunity because the Ivermectin helps your body establish natural immunity for the future.

If you already have the shot then you need to hope and pray that numerous experts are wrong! It's very sad to say that you can't depend on hearing the truth from our government leadership or anyone influenced by them, or the pharmaceutical industries, and your family doctor is between a rock and a hard place with this issue.

There are two common medicines that have been used around the world for around forty years with few, if any, side effects that are effective with Covid. They are Hydroxychloroquine and Ivermectin, both should be taken with zinc and vitamin D3 and a multivitamin. They are available by computer at myfreedoctor.com (on a smartphone, etc.) or frontlinemedicaldoctors.com and prescribed through doctors in other states. The cost is around $100 which includes a phone consultation. We prefer Ivermectin because we think it works better, and it helps with other flus and viruses also, and works if you waited too long to take it. We have also read numerous doctor testimonies who have prescribed Ivermectin to their patients and highly recommend it. Keep in mind that these current sources may be canceled out. Be aware that there are others offering similar services that are overcharging and can- not be trusted.

A less expensive option that can be bought at local farm stores is Ivermectin 1.87% for horses. It comes in a paste and costs about $6.00 to 10.00 per tube. You can take it by putting it on a spoon and then licking it off. You take it according to your weight and each tube will give you four to six doses depending on how much you weigh. There is an adjustment on the tube in fifty pound increments for getting the right dose for your weight. If your weight is between adjustment marks, go to the next higher mark. Some tubes have 250 lb. increments and others have 50 lb. The 50 lb. increment works best for human measurement. A common practice is to take it two days in a row. Mariann thinks that if you don't start to feel better in 3 days, take it one more time. We know people who took it 5 times without adverse affects. We think its best to wait until you have the Covid before you take the Ivermectin. That way you will build up a natural immunity that may last the rest of your life. If you take it before getting the Covid as a preventative, you will not get the same benefit of the long term natural immunity.

We know of many people who have used it, some seriously ill, Ron and other family members included. Everyone has recovered with no obvious side effects. Most people start to feel better within two days.

Groeninks Elevator in Nunica has a variety of brands on their horse wormer shelf that you can choose from. Make sure you get a brand with Ivermectin 1.87% paste for horses only and not with other ingredients added, except for apple flavor. Make sure you don't buy it with anything else added!

Tractor Supply stores also sell it. They keep it under the counter by the cash register. Some TSC managers discourage people from buying it for human use and have even said that people have died from using it. We don't believe that to be true. The exception may be a person that did not follow the directions or use common sense and took too much.

The brand that tastes the best, to our knowledge, is Durvet. Some brands don't taste very good and are not pleasant to consume.

The problem is the pharmaceutical industry would rather sell costly unproven vaccines with no liability, to the government. They get paid a lot of our tax money and use some of it to put tremendous pressure against the use of inexpensive medicines that do not provide them with a profit. We have been told that one reason that the drug companies didn't want alternative medicines available is that it endangered their experimental vaccine authorization. Experimental authorizations are not given if alternate medicine is available. It doesn't seem to bother them that people are dying a slow, miserable death because of their greed. There are other remedies that have been suppressed, also.

This is sincere advice from a husband and wife with many years of experience and resources to draw on. We are taking the risk of being sued or persecuted for sharing this against the possibility that this information will save somebody's life!

P.S. We first wrote about this over a year ago and have updated it several times with additional information. Time has shown this info to be very accurate and new information is even more alarming. Our opinion is that pregnant women and children should absolutely not get the shot, except for some extraordinary circumstance.

The problem is that McCullough is one of the most credible medical experts you're likely to find, particularly in regard to treating COVID-19. He's a journal editor, has published more than 650 peer-reviewed papers indexed in PUBMED, and is president of Cardio-Renal Society of America studying the interface between heart and kidney disease.

Consider the CDC's own database of adverse reactions. According to the most recent numbers from the Vaccine Adverse Events Reporting System (VAERS), more than 16,000 fatalities and almost 24,000 cases of permanent disability have been linked to COVID-19 vaccines.

An independent review of VAERS numbers backs up his suspicions.

In an early pre-print, a study published in a journal from London found that 86 percent of the deaths reported to VAERS had no other explanation than the vaccine.

"About half the deaths occurred within 48 hours of getting the shot, and 80 percent occur within a week. There's been no medical product that's been so tightly related to death than the COVID-19 vaccines, and it's biologically plausible," McCullough said. "The spike protein itself is lethal. It damages organs. It causes blood clots. It causes stroke."

McCullough said. "If a product is linked to five unexplained deaths, the standard is to give it a black box warning—'Warning: May cause death.' Fifty deaths? It's yanked off the market. That's our tolerance for a product: 50 deaths within 30 days, irrespective of causality."

But according to VAERS reports, by Jan. 22, there were already 182 deaths associated with COVID-19 vaccines.

But doesn't the vaccine at least slow the spread of a deadly disease? The unvaccinated are blamed for prolonging the pandemic, but McCullough points to research suggesting that it's really the vaccinated who are responsible for COVID's continuous spread.

"It makes sense, since the vaccinated now can carry huge amounts of virus and that's probably what's fueling our Delta epidemic contributing to infection," he said.

"Open the windows," he said. "The virus hates fresh air. In Singapore, they did studies that [showed] if you're outside, it's impossible to transmit the virus."

Another important tip is to treat early. Avoid going into the hospital.

"Early treatment is what decides a severe case or not. Demand it. Ask your doctor, 'Are you ready to treat me?' If not, go to a telemedicine service," he said. "We estimate that 85 percent of American's who died of COVID died needlessly because they were denied early treatment. We couldn't save them all, but we could have made a huge impact."

For early treatment, you can start simple with nutraceuticals: particularly vitamins C and D, zinc, and quercetin. McCullough says they don't save severely ill patients, but studies show deficiencies in these nutrients put you at greater risk.

Other recommendations include hydroxychloroquine (which, supported by 250 studies, is the most widely used drug in the world to treat COVID-19) or ivermectin (a drug supported by more than 60 studies.)

"The only studies that don't show a great benefit from hydroxychloroquine are late-stage patients on a mechanical ventilator," he said. "But all the early treatment studies of hydroxychloroquine show it works."

If you do end up in the hospital, McCullough recommends a monoclonal antibody infusion, such as Regeneron. It's what President Donald Trump took to treat his COVID.

McCullough said many doses of the drug are going unused on the shelf because of this mentality of not treating COVID.

"Demand monoclonal antibodies," he said.

"Half the nation is about ready to lose their jobs in the next few months, including me. Really? Since when? A vaccine is going to make us lose our jobs?"

The fact that the vaccine doesn't work well enough or long enough—and obviously is not save in everyone—adds to the indignity.

"We're in mass psychosis. ... COVID 19 is a global disaster, and, unfortunately, the vaccine is making it worse."
