Doctor Honored and Investigated by Same State for Same Work

excerpt from article in The Epoch Times, 03/30/22

...investigation for misconduct related to the same work, in a classic case of one hand not knowing what the other is doing.

Dr. Paul Marik, founder of the Front Line COVID-19 Critical Care Alliance (FLCCC), was recognized on March 11 after the state’s House of Delegates unanimously approved a resolution for what lawmakers called “his courageous treatment of critically ill COVID-19 patients.”

“Instead of playing it safe and going along with so-called conventional wisdom, Dr. Marik dared to take a truly scientific approach by questioning and innovating in an environment where both were not only frowned upon, but for which he was persecuted,” said Del. Dave LaRock, a Republican and the resolution’s primary sponsor.

Just a few days later, Marik received a letter dated March 15 from the Virginia Department of Health Professions informing him he had until March 29 to respond to an investigation by the agency into his medical practices.

Marik told The Epoch Times that being honored by the Virginia legislature has offset some of the mental drain that allegations of medical misconduct against him have caused him.

“I am honored and personally deeply touched by the commendation by the Virginia legislature,” he said. “This has been a very difficult journey for me which has taken an enormous toll.”

Before his work with COVID, Marik was known internationally as a pioneer in the life-saving use of intravenous Vitamin C to treat sepsis, a serious infection that often leads to death under conventional treatments.

The contradiction of the simultaneous commendation and investigation of Marik demonstrates that government administrations have “gone rogue ... to stifle doctor and patient choice and autonomy,” according to Dr. Meryl Nass, who’s license was suspended in February by Maine’s medical licensing board for prescribing alternative medicines to treat and prevent COVID-19 over the vaccine.

“Does the right hand not know what the left hand is doing?” Nass told The Epoch Times, pointing to legislation recently approved by the New Hampshire House to make human grade ivermectin available without a prescription; similar legislation is pending in several other states.

Like Marik, Nass has lengthy credentials in the field of viruses and vaccines.

Nass is considered a global expert in vaccine-induced diseases and led the successful bid to replace the mandatory anthrax vaccine for active-duty members of the U.S. military after it appeared to be making them ill.

Both Marik and Nass emphasized that human-grade ivermectin has been used by billions around the world over the past few decades.

Through the FLCCC, Marik formulated two protocol treatments for prevention and early outpatient treatment of COVID-19.

New Members for the Fruitport VFW

by Max Riekse

The Fruitport VFW - Veterans of Foreign Wars is looking for new members. Membership is open to male and female veterans who have served overseas in a combat zone such as the Persian Gulf War; the Iraq and Afghanistan Wars; served in Korea - any time; Vietnam, Panama, Grenada, etc. Our post does not have a bar, however, your VFW membership card entitles you to go to any VFW club - bar in the world; there are VFW posts in Europe, Japan, England, etc, and all over the United States. The Fruitport VFW post is small, and has done the May Memorial Day ceremony at the Fruitport Pine Hills cemetery on Monday for many years; along with leading the Fruitport Memorial Day Parade for over 50 years. We could always use people for our VFW Post Color Guard. The post also actively supports the Fruitport Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts; since girls are now eligible to join the Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts, our post needs female VFW members to mentor the young women in our local Scouts. One of the POC’s for the Fruitport VFW Post is Max Riekse; P.O. Box 82, Fruitport, 49415; (231) 865-3238. Dues are $35; VFW Life Memberships are available. You will need to provide a copy of your DD-214 showing overseas membership in a combat zone. Andy Peck is our Post Commander.
